Special Town Meeting May 16

Water betterments spark interest

Whatever fears there might have been that there would be no quorum at the special town meeting on May 16 seemed to be displaced Tuesday night. The Finance Committee hearing on the warrant for that meeting erupted into a series of arguments by voters. Most seriously argued was the question of betterments for replacement of water mains in article three.

Residents of Marcus Road and Oakridge Circle debated furiously for an hour and a quarter with water commissioner Arthur Smith, themselves, and others, over the rights and wrongs of betterments. One person only was from Hathaway Acres, Mitchell Spiris of Truman Road. Mr. Spiris, halfway through the arguments, stood up to say he had been in favor of betterments for water mains, and now he was not.

After World War II, Hathaway Acres was developed by A.P. Rounds, and the two roads off Gowing Road were developed by another person. They installed two inch water mains, and services to every home, off those mains. The streets were laid out to the satisfaction of the then planning board, and the streets, after being surfaced, were accepted by the town meeting.

The presumption is that the two inch water mains were laid with the approval of the water commissioners. That may or may not be so, but the argument, as advanced by Dom Beninati and Dick Gustafson was that the town had accepted those water mains, and it was now responsible for them, and their maintenance. Others joined in with the same and other arguments.

They were, they said, paying their share of the cost of the water treatment plant (off Butters Row, Ed.), and they were not getting any of the clean water from that station.

Beninati related in some detail the events of a meeting on February 4 with the water commissioners, wherein, he said, $206,000 in surplus revenue and $260,000 from the state plus other funds amounted to a total of $560,000 for the replacing of two inch mains by six inch mains.

"We left that meeting with the understanding they were going to replace those water pipes. The street was built under betterment, and we asked at that time to put in six inch water mains, and it was refused."

Beninati quoted from Chapter 40 several times, the section of the general laws regarding water mains and commissions. "It doesn't do anything about replacement. It says for placement. The town is responsible for the replacement of those water mains!"

The rebuttals to Mr. Beninati and others came from Arthur Smith. He was good natured, and he gave as well as he received.

Smith told Beninati that the water commissioners had made no such promise. The amount of money coming from the state was, he said, $175,000.

"This is a free country! You can go to the town meeting; you can vote as you choose, for betterments or for bonding. You have your choice!"

Betterments (payments by abuttors) or bonding (payment by the whole town) were two items that were largely discussed. Residents felt that inasmuch as they were paying for the bonding of the water treatment plant the rest of the town could help to pay for the water mains, by the bonding.

Smith explained several times that the money that comes in, from the sale of water, is used by the commissioners to run the water department, to pay for maintenance and repairs, and to improve the system. The water commissioners want, in about five years, to erect a water treatment plant in North Wilmington, and to erect a standpipe in North Wilmington, so as to improve the water in that part of the town.

If the improvement of the water mains, taking out two inch mains and replacing by six inch mains, is done under bonding, the price of water will go up, he said. He guessed at a 10 percent increase in price.

Then, if there are more water mains which are replaced, the price of wter can go up another 10 or 15 percent. In five years, Smith said, the price of water can have doubled.

And, he said, at a different time, this would not allow for the erection of the new treatment plant or standpipe. He added that among the costs this year was one for vandalism to one of the pumping stations.

Another discussion by a lady from Marcus Road was about houselots on curves, not on corner lots. She said that someone would be paying $7,000 in betterments. This was not for her own lot, which she felt would be fairly reasonably priced at $2500.

"If spread out over the town it seems fairer. It should not be voted by people who do not understand the problem. I have been here 10 years and they have only flushed the pipes once. Some people will be voted out of their home."

Margaret McNeil of Oakridge Circle (who also spoke on other issues) said she would like to see the article passed over in the town meeting. She told how water commissioner George Allan had said they had $260,000 and all that was needed was matching funds. "Mr. Allan does not drink that water!"

Her husband told of the second town meeting he had attended,

THE CLASP PARTIAL DENTURE

If you need a partial denture to fill the gap caused by missing teeth, you may want to have a clasp partial denture to solve this problem. It can be less expensive than a fixed bridge if the supporting teeth are healthy and don't have to be crowned.

In the clasp partial denture technique, hooks are used to clasp the bridge to the supporting teeth. Some reshaping of the supporting teeth may be needed to give stronger support to the clasps. If the gap to be filled is in the back of your mouth, the clasps will hardly be noticeable when you open your mouth.

This type of partial denture is usually removed at night when you go to bed. Like your natural teeth, you should take care to make sure the denture is kept clean and free of plaque. Special care is needed in keeping the clasps clean because food and bacteria tend to collect where the clasps hook around your natural teeth.

But with good oral hygiene and regular checkups, you can maintain the good appearance and health of your mouth, and help keep the partial denture firmly in place.

Variance given for car sales in Tewksbury

Ambrose Hines of Claire St., Tewksbury had plenty of friends, when he appeared before the Board of Appeals. Mr. Hines seeks a special permit to convert the Patriot Frame and Auto Body Shop at 2185 Main Street into a sales area for second hand automobiles.

The request was granted on April 25, for not more than 10 cars on the premises. The appeal board also ruled that Hines should again appear before them, at the end of a year, for a review of the case.

Hines told the board that there is 150 feet of frontage on Main Street and that the building inspector had ruled the zoning was wrong. The building is 24 feet wide and had been used for auto repairs. He seeks to improve the area, he said. He had talked with abuttors, and there was no problem over his proposed business.

Among those who appeared to speak for Hines was Armando DeCarolis, Dick Sughrue and Selectman Bill Hallisey. Hallisey said that Hines seeks to purchase the property, and fix it up, and that he would be the first person to appear against Hines if Hines didn't do things properly.

Hines will need, Hallisey said, to get a second class license from the selectmen, in order to sell used cars on the site.

Undersized lot denied

The appeal of Kenneth and Ruth Young of 25 Ninth Street for a variance to permit the construction of a home on a lot between Eighth and Ninth streets was denied by the Tewksbury Board of Appeals. In addition to the opposition of the building inspector there was opposition from members of the family, one of them being Tom Young of Pelham, N.H., a brother of Kenneth.

The building inspector had ruled that an acre of land was needed. The proposal was to build on a lot of 9600 square feet. Attorney Kevin Sullivan told the appeals board that many of the homes in the area were on lots of 10,000 square feet and that the construction of a home on that particular lot would improve the area.

Tom Young told the board that he was the executor of his father's estate, and that estate was now being discussed in probate court. He felt there should be no decision until probate court action has been taken.

Tom was joined in testimony by two relatives and two other persons.

Land swap okayed

The Tewksbury Appeals Board granted the appeal of Maureen Chaff for a variance on an unusually shaped parcel of land on Woodcrest Drive. The appeal was to effect a transfer of some of the land to abuttors, Mr. and Mrs. Scott.

Also granted was an appeal from David Gath, for a building permit for land on Old Trull Road. A previous permit had expired. Gath told the board that he now has an opportunity to sell the land.

Two family use granted

Norman and Charlotte Byron received a favorable response, on an appeal to allow their home at 195 Hill Street to be a two family home. The decision was only for members of the family, the couple and their son and daughter-in-law, and will become void if the property is transferred. Many neighbors were present for the hearing.

Mr. and Mrs. Byron had purchased the property some years ago in the belief that it was for two families. The son and his wife live upstairs.

The building inspector had denied them the use of the home when Norman sought to have another door put in.

It was, the chairman of the appeals board said, "an unique situation.

WILMINGTON HIGH SCHOOL is proud to present the 9th annual
Red Cross
BLOODMOBILE
FRIDAY, MAY 6, 1:00 to 7:00 p.m.
WILMINGTON HIGH SCHOOL GYM

The officers of the Senior Class of Wilmington High School are urging everyone age 18 and over (17 with written parental consent) to donate a pint of blood on Friday afternoon. The process is relatively simple — and surprisingly rewarding.

Since 1975, the graduating seniors of Wilmington High School have been sponsoring a Red Cross Bloodmobile as their graduation gift to the town. The juniors, sophomores and freshmen co-sponsor the blood drive. Also, the National Honor Society is also a co-sponsor for the first time this year.

Help keep a great tradition alive at WHS! Roll up your sleeve and give blood on Friday, May 6.

Roll up your sleeves

It takes all types!

Strong talk on Wilmington PRD zoning

The Finance Committee, Tuesday night (May 3) had a two hour discussion on the proposed new zoning bylaw and on the new proposal for Planned Residential Development (PRD) in Wilmington, to be discussed in the coming special town meeting.

The first 20 minutes of the hearing on the proposal for new zoning was marked by a discussion by Duncan and Margaret McNeil. They were against it.

Many of the persons present had been taking part in the discussions for some months, but Margaret McNeil argued that "no one knows what is going on."

Arnold Blake of the planning board took exception to that remark. There had been, he said, public hearings ever since last fall, and many changes had been made as a result of those public hearings. He compared the situation to the development of a town budget.

Many persons, he said, do not know what goes into a town budget because they do not attend the meetings where the discussions go on. "There has been a lot of input, into this, from the people who have attended."

Joan O'Rourke stood up to say that the planning board had held a lot of other hearings too; many meetings before different groups.

Dick Dussault of Marcus Road, wondered whether there was a summary of the zoning that was available to the people. He was told by Carole Hamilton that there is a summary available in the library.

Mark Lutz, fincom member, wanted to know whether the state had input into the new regulations. The answer came from Bill Hooper, planning board chairman. Changes had been made over the years, Hooper said, to bring the regulations into line with Chapter 808 of the state laws.

Mrs. NcNeil questioned the zoning for the Buzzell School if it is to become elderly housing. Will the limit of apartments be applied?

No, said Mrs. Hamilton. The town meeting will have to vote it, and determine it.

John Peak of Marcus Road wanted to know why the community housing would have to go to the town meeting.

Bill Hooper answered with one word, as did Arnold Blake.

"Money" said Hooper; "Land" said Blake.

PRD zoning

Bill Hooper told the fincom that the planning board had held its hearing on PRD zoning on April 26. There had been one change, he said, a deletion in the municipal requirements, which kept PRD zoning down to very few sites.

PRD had the acreage required cut from 20 acres to eight acres. PRD has to come to the planning board for a special permit. This is over and above the requirements that it has to be approved in the town meeting.

"In this town meeting" Hooper said, "there will be no one asking for rezoning for PRD."

Someone asked how many sites there will be in town that are available. Sandy Murphy who is the planning board clerk, said a previous survey showed 20 sites, of eight acres or more, which are within the range of the sewer line. She believes quite a few of the sites will have problems with the town conservation commission. Carole Hamilton pointed out that part of the sewer goes through parts of the town that are already quite congested.

Margaret McNeil: "Is this the same PRD as was turned down twice by the town meeting? A disgrace! Absolutely a disgrace!"

Arthur Smith rose to say he had absolutely the opposite feeling.

"If I was a kid 25 years old I could not find a place in which to live. Every town in this state makes it impossible for the young people. Young people need homes, and they cannot afford $100,000 for homes."

"I think eight acres is too large," said Smith. "Reduce it to three or four. Half these lots are under water and the conservation commission will never let you get near them.

"We are driving these young people out of the state. It is time we face the facts that young people have to live and that two families can live in the same house."

"We send our young people to live in some broken down rat infested trap in Lawrence! This is a working man's town, not a Harvard or Weston. I think eight acres is too restrictive."

Mrs. McNeil said her youngest child was about to be married and would live in Lowell. "He has to learn. I had to when I was young."

Arnold Blake: "These are adjusted to meet the needs of the young people. It is only fair. We reduce the acreage of land used. We reduced the number of units, all in the nature of a compromise.

"I have to agree with Mr. Smith, that there are no homes, no mother-in-law apartments. The day is going to come when we are going to have to do it."

Violations at trailer park, inspector says

Members of the Tewksbury Board of Appeals have made personal inspections, during the past week, of the Lakeside Mobile Home Court, on the southwesterly side of Long Pond.

A report from Building Inspector Bill Granfield says that there are "many violations" of the building code, in that trailer park. The Tewksbury planning board also feels that there are zoning violations.

The planning board recently voted to recommend denial on a variance application that asks for an extension of the park into an area which was shown on approved plans made in 1951, and for which a previous variance had been voted by the board of appeals. At the present time there are 126 trailer homes in the park. The "approved" plan shows sites for 142.

The appeals board members will have to decide whether or not the present owner can extend into the area of 16 unused sites. They will also have to decide on whether or not the reports of violations are valid. Attorney Kevin Sullivan presented the case before the board of appeals on April 25.

The accusations of violations of building laws, Sullivan said, for a permitted use, under state law "is a legal point, which has been kicked around. The town counsel and Mr. Granfield are now researching the case."

In some instances, he said, trailer owners have built a one room addition, such as a sun room, keeping entirely within the area allocated for the trailer. These are the alleged violations. The arguments seemed to focus, for a while, on a trailer of a Mr. Coletti, which has such an addition.

Mr. DeMaggio, the former owner, Sullivan said, had obtained a variance back in June 1951, of which, he believed, the planning board was not aware. The present owner purchased the property 12 to 15 years ago, under the terms of that variance.

The planning board, he said, had never requested any information about the variance. Over $1 million in taxes are paid each year to the town of Tewksbury, there are said to be no police problems, and it is also said there are people who want to move into the trailer park.

The records show that the variance was granted, Sullivan said. The only entrance to the park is through Billerica. It would be a hardship to the owner to deny the variance, it was argued.

The Tewksbury assessors have taxed the land for many years, he said, on the basis of the "approved" plan. They assess for 142 sites.

Driveway approved for Metropolitan Life?

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, which owns 17 acres of land off North Street and near Ames Hill in Tewksbury, seems to have won the right to construct a 60 foot driveway off North Street into its property. The driveway would double the size of the present unused driveway to the Digital property. It is located nearly opposite Wang.

The decision has been pending for several months for two reasons. The main reason is that the five members of the Tewksbury Board of Appeals who heard the arguments have not all been present at one time in any subsequent board of appeals meeting.

There is also a question about payment of taxes, which was raised by Chief Assessor Norman Boudreau at the hearing. Metropolitan is in the process of "Landcourting" its property, a court process which would remove all doubt as to ownership. This has kept the tax assessing process in abeyance.

On April 25 two of the five members who heard the case, Jean Russell and Bruce Gordon were absent, but Chairman Bob Greenleaf called for a vote; which resulted in a unanimous decision in favor. If either of the absent members vote in favor, then the board will be recorded as being in favor.

Appeals Board member Don McKinley, who did not sit on the case, recorded himself to be in opposition. McKinley argued with both the chairman and member Bill Schuellein, citing the juxtaposition of the Wang driveway, and the nearness of the fire station as potential dangers.

Both the chairman and Schuellein told him that the arguments were finished, and the decision was up to the five members who heard the case. McKinley was not silenced by those statements.

Chairman Bob Greenleaf said he "felt that Met(ropolitan) has done its utmost" in its presentation of the case. Later McKinley noted that if both the two absent members "were not in favor" the case would be defeated.

If, he said, one more member votes approval Metropolitan will have the right to construct a 60 foot driveway with curbing separating the entrance from the exit lane. Metropolitan is planning the construction of several office buildings on its property.

On May 3 Jean Russell did vote in favor, and at the same time said that she was sympathetic to the position of McKinley. So, it turned out, was Chairman Bob Greenleaf.

The board agreed that McKinley should have the authority to further investigate, even though he was not one of the members to sit on the case. McKinley can discuss the case with the Tewksbury assessors, and with the Tewksbury Planning Board, and report back to the Board of Appeals.

Greenleaf agreed that McKinley had some good points, regarding traffic, and pointed out further that there is about 100 acres of land owned by Metropolitan nearer to the Digital site off Andover Street which might, in the future, be using the 60 foot driveway. He was much in favor of a conversation between McKinley and the planning board.

letter to the editor

Dear Larz:

I would like to express my opinion of the previous town meeting, as a voter, not as an expert. As a resident it was embarrassing — the lack of interest in town government and how the voters' tax dollars are being spent.

To reach a quorum of 150 voters, the meeting had to be held up until enough interested voters arrived.

The majority attending with a personal cause to gain, could classify it as one of the better meetings to accomplish one's ends.

I would not care to see a replay of the April 23 performance.

It is unfortunate that we had such a low turnout since a delegation representing Africa was in attendance. It would be interesting to know their reaction to what was learned from this meeting and by others attending.

Sincerely,
W.J. Belbin

Operations assistant for Tewksbury DPW

There is to be an "operations assistant" for the Superintendent of Public Works in Tewksbury. The board of selectmen so voted, in a DPW meeting on Saturday, April 30.

The vote may help to clear up what was becoming an ugly situation. The operations assistant is primarily to work on water and sewer problems, and the collection of water revenues, which are at this time in the process of being brought up to date after several years of being behind schedule. The assistant will be under the supervision of DPW Superintendent Pattison.

The assistant will take some of the pressure off Pattison, who is currently overseeing the water and sewer operations first hand. The post may not take all the pressure off him, however. He will still have to meet with the new operations assistant to discuss courses of action. And Pattison feels it may take several months for the new person to become comfortable in the post.

What Pattison says he also needs, and has not been able to get for some five years, is a "general foreman", who would be the direct supervisor of DPW personnel. The general foreman would be responsible for assigning personnel at the start of the day and for overseeing fill-in needs, etc. Currently that task is split between department foremen and Pattison.

During the past few weeks the pressures have become more noticeable.

Several weeks ago the selectmen voted that Pattison should have an agenda, and the supporting documents in the hands of the selectmen on Mondays prior to the DPW meetings on Thursday. The motion had been made by Selectman Bill Hallisey.

Agenda materials had been arriving late, and such was the case at a recent meeting. The agenda was given to the selectmen after the DPW meeting had started. This led to a direct clash.

There are several reasons for the problem, the main one being that the Tewksbury DPW operates on a bare minimum budget.

Because of the financial restrictions the DPW board has turned down every request for assistance. This year Pattison again asked for the "general foreman" position and in his budget request sought $2,943 to offer a paid promotion for someone in the department. That person would also be a working foreman. The request was deleted by the DPW board.

Pattison explained the need for the position in his written budget recommendations on March 4. He asked the board to "create the new position of General Foreman. This position is absolutely essential to assure this community that the department is operating at its maximum efficiency."

Pattison had also asked for two office managers, to work part time schedules - 26 weeks long and 40 hours a week for each.

There had been no positive response. Instead selectmen were doing what can be described as a "slow burn" because the DPW agendas were not being prepared on time. Not only that, but often there were items on the agenda that were new to the selectmen.

Those new items result from the fact that Pattison is a person who likes to do favors for people. People approach him with problems. If he cannot act directly, then he is likely to put in another item on the agenda for the next meeting, items that are unexpected by the selectmen.

In the April 28 meeting, Selectmen Bill Hallisey and Charles Coldwell were the most outspoken. The new younger board members also took part, but in milder tones.

Hallisey moved to "directly reprimand the superintendent" for "disobeying orders of this board." A few moments later, as he continued to discuss the charges he added that the superintendent "insults us, as far as I am concerned."

It was noted that Chairman Paul Sullivan had not received an agenda, at noon time. Hallisey felt that it was "time the superintendent stopped playing games."

Pattison, quietly, admitted that he was not perfect. He had, he said, "worked damned hard over the past weekend," and "until 2 a.m. today." He admitted that he was wrong, and accepted the blame.

It was agreed that the discussion should be tabled "at this time" and "until such time as the agenda is again not prepared."

But a few moments later an item came up in the agenda, which, Hallisey said, was a "dangerous position." "Don't put things in the agenda unless the board is prepared to discuss them," he told Pattison. "It's got to stop."

Sullivan agreed, but said that the board is reluctant to reprimand Mr. Pattison. On the vote to reprimand, only Hallisey voted "aye." Coldwell voted "present" and the three remaining Selectmen, Sullivan, Tom Girard and Brian Sheehan, voted "no."

With an operations assistant to assist Pattison it is possible that Pattison may have more time for other tasks, while the assistant does other work that Pattison has been trying to do inbetween his many other duties.

The new position becomes available partly as a result of the retirement of Denis Bradley from the DPW. Mr. Bradley, among other things, had been a sign maker. One position, in the DPW, became "open" when Bradley left.

The DPW, it is understood, will give up that laboring position and the finance committee has recommended the sum of $10,000 for the purchase of signs for the DPW.

Frank Tuttle builds perpetual calendar

In the days of Julius Ceasar the Romans brought the calendar up to date. Somehow, up to that time the leap year had not been understood. The Julian calendar, as it was called, lasted until 1582.

There was a problem. Every 400 years there is another figure that has to be introduced. Gregory was the Pope, and he corrected the calendar, which since then has been known as the Gregorian calendar.

In Great Britain, however, the people refused to have anything to do with a calendar bearing a Pope's name.

By 1752 the British calendar was 13 days out of timing. It was something in the same nature as the present day Greek Orthodox calendar, which has never been corrected. The British then advanced their calendar 13 days, and adopted the Gregorian calendar at that time.

Those 13 days were not understood by the British public. There was a popular outcry to 'give us back our 13 days." And, to add emphasis, George Washington was born on February 22 — right?

No. He was born in the days of the Julian calendar.

Confusing?

Calendars and their problems are confusing to non-mathematical and non-astronmical types.

But not to Frank Tuttle of Carson Avenue, Wilmington.

Frank has made a slide rule, which shows all the corrections. It is easy for him to give a history of dates, and tell what day it was, many, many years ago, and in days yet to come.

The Town Crier asked Frank for the day of the week in which Dr. Henry Hiller died. All Town Crier readers will, of course, remember that Dr. Hiller, after having fallen from his carriage and breaking his neck, died on November 5, 1888.

Frank found the answer very quickly on his slide rule. It was on a Monday.

MVC girls' track

Wilmington upsets Methuen, 62-56

by Rick Cooke
Sports Editor

Wilmington High School's varsity track girls cracked the win column Monday afternoon, stunning a good Methuen team, 62-56 thanks to a big kick from sophomore Debbie Errico on the final leg of the mile relay.

Debbie caught her Methuen opponent in the stretch run and breezed home from that point to give coach Frank Kelley's team the victory.

The win was Wilmington's first in five meets, while Methuen's record fell to 2-2 on the season with Monday's loss at the WHS track.

The Wildcats led 57-56 entering the final event, the mile relay. The quartet of Lauren Callahan, Mary McNaughton, Nancy Newark and Errico came in at 4:37.0 to score the win that gave their team the meet.

Senior Karen Rowe continued to display great versatility, competing in the long jump for only the second time and winning with a 15'2¾" effort. Karen also won the 100 yard dash (12.0) in the face of a stiff breeze and anchored the winning 440 relay team that came home at 53.2. That unit also received fine efforts from Ann Ryan, April Smallidge and Nancy Jones.

Another talented WHS senior, Cheryl Branscombe, came up with a double win in the discus (100'10½") and shot put (34'5½").

Other top spots went to senior miler McNaughton (5:24.0) and Andrea Hayden in the two mile (12:06.5).

Grabbing seconds for the Cats were hurdler Stephanie Briggs, miler Callahan, Errico (880), Jones (220), Jannie Wolff (440) and Lisa Desforge in the two mile.

Important thirds were taken by Ryan (100), Briggs (shot put), Newark (440) and Lauree Murray (880). Wilmington won eight events in all to secure the victory.

Olshaw, Wildcats catch Redmen

by Rick Cooke
Sports Editor

A timely attack that pecked away at a 3-0 deficit and the solid pitching of senior righthander Ed Olshaw powered the Wildcats to a 6-3 MVC baseball victory over Tewksbury Monday afternoon at the WHS diamond.

The win upped the WHS slate to 4-3 on the season, while the Redmen slipped to 1-4. Coach Dick Scanlon's club got off to a shaky start in the top half of the first, as the Redmen banged three of their five hits off Olshaw to score three runs.

Terry Feran's two run single and an RBI safety by Paul Laurin accounted for the three first inning runs.

Olshaw settled down nicely after that first frame, outdueling TMHS senior righty Boo Tremlett. Olshaw (3-1) was helped by the bats of firstbaseman Bob Ducharme (two singles, sacrifice fly) Dennis Moran (single) and Don Gorski (sacrifice fly). Olshawn helped his own cause with an RBI double in the bottom of the third inning.

The Redmen were plagued by a series of walks and wild pitches late in the game that help Wilmington pad its' lead.

'Big inning' Wildcats start fast

The Wilmington High School junior varsity baseball team has jumped off to a 3-0-1 mark in its' first four MVC games. Coach Bill Simmons' club also has a thrilling non-league win over Reading to its' credit.

Wilmington 5 Reading 2

Don Gorski fired a two-hitter and struck out three in the Wildcate come-from-behind victory. Trailing 2-0 in the sixth inning, the Wildcat JV's exploded for five runs. Captain David Sullivan's two run single was the key blow. Gorski, Larry Grant and Chris Dindo also had key hits in the inning. Slick fielding by Brian Wetzler also collected two hits in the game.

Wilmington 4 Methuen 3

Trailing 2-1 in the fifth inning, doubles by Salvi Woods and Chris Dindo (three hits) sandwiched around singles by Brian Wetzler and Scott Monroe (two hits) provided three runs and the margin of victory.

Larry Grant went the distance on the mound, scattering six hits while striking out four. Jay Barrett had a double and played a steady game in the outfield, as did Steve Stokes and Scott Monroe.

Wilmington 11 Lawrence 10

Continuing their big inning offense, the Wildcats sent 16 men to the plate and exploded for all 11 of their runs in the second inning. Larry Grant's double and singles by Brian Wetzler, Chris Dindo, Steve Stokes, Mike Woods, Salvi Woods and Jay Barrett keyed the uprising.

In the final inning the Lancers came up with seven runs, and both WHS pitchers Frank Carta and Larry Grant were injured, but in came Mark Barnett to strike out the last batter with the bases loaded to seal the victory.

Wilmington 12 Dracut 10

Trailing 10-2 going into the fifth inning, the Wildcats scored nine runs. Each of the nine batters got on base and scored a run in the inning. RBI singles were stroked by Steve Raso,

Carbone leads Wildcats past Redmen

Wilmington High School sophomore Sharon Carbone earned star of the game honors in MVC softball action Monday afternoon, driving home two runs with a triple and cutting down the tying run at the plate with her throw from centerfield in her team's 5-4 victory over Tewksbury.

Sophomore pitcher Kim Mytych took home the win for coach Jack Fahey's club, while Linda Barry took the loss for Tewksbury. Mytych chucked a nine-hitter in improving the WHS record to 3-1.

Six errors hurt the TMHS cause, but the WHS bats had a good deal to do with the loss, as Kathy Robinson, Cheryl Evans and Donna Foley helped key the attack.

Marianne Bolton and Missy Riddle rapped two hits apiece for the Redmen, with singles from Laura Briggs, Leann Stewart, Ann Marie Lafortune, Vicki Westover and Heather Coyle.

Two comeback victories made the second week of the season a successful one for the Wilmington High School softball squad. Dracut scored three runs in the first inning, but the Wildcats retaliated with 10 in the second and eventually won, 16-7. Kim Mytych was the winning pitcher and belted a bases loaded double to help her own cause.

Donna Foley played two positions and slashed a pair of hits, including a bases loaded triple. Mary Linehan, Sandra Crowley, and Kathy Robinson also had two hits apiece.

Wilmington defeated Lawrence, 15-5 for the second victory of the week, scoring 12 runs in the sixth inning. Once again Kim Mytych was the winning pitcher, and she had two hits, one with the bases full to seal the victory. Sharon Carbone and Mary Linehan also had two hits each.

Cheryl Evans came up with key defensive plays throughout the day for the Wildcats.

Freshmen softball

Tewksbury blasts Bishop Fenwick

Tewksbury's freshmen softball team won its first home game against Bishop Fenwick 38-11 April 18, as Kristin Doherty went the distance, striking out eight and walking only four batters.

In a close, but error-filled game Wednesday, the girls lost, 20-17 in the return matchup against Bishop Fenwick.

Pam Brothers started and had four strikeouts and two walks. Relief pitchers who tried to help out were Mary Ellen McDonald and Tracy Danner.

Bishop Fenwick's pitchers allowed 16 walks, but gave up only eight hits. Connecting at the plate for a single each for Tewksbury were Pam Brothers, Chris White, Karen Hennessy, Kerry McLaughlin and Chris Kearns. Sue Downey chipped in two singles and Missy Glencross belted a triple.

The girls' next four games are at home against Wilmington, Andover West, Greater Lawrence and Dracut.

Fishing derby

All Wilmington fishermen will have a chance to show their angling skills Saturday, May 21 at Silver Lake.

The fishing derby is sponsored by the Lions Club and Recreation Department. The contest will run from 8 a.m. to noon. Prizes will be awarded for the biggest (heaviest) fish for boys and girls ages 12 and under and ages 13 and over.

Clinic-cleanup

Silver Lake will be a busy place Saturday, May 21 with the fishing derby and canoe clinic - Silver Lake cleanup. The cleanup will be conducted by Larry Flaherty and his boy scouts from St. Dorothy's Church and Recreation Director Ron Swasey. Other volunteers are urged to join in the fun and help make the lake a safer and more beautiful place to visit.

The clinic and cleanup will run from 1 to 4 p.m. Canoes are needed for the afternoon. Call the Recreation Office at 658-6512 to offer assistance.

Whitewater rafting

The Recreation Department will be heading north again this June for a whitewater rafting trip on Maine's Kennebec River. The June 18 river run has a few openings. Call the Rec Office at 658-6512 for details.

Summer concerts

The Recreation Department is making plans for another summer of family entertainment on the town common. Concerts run from 7:30 to 9 p.m. on the following Tuesdays: June 7, 21; July 5, 19 and August 2. Raindates are the following Tuesday. Also on July 4 the Kiwanis Club will sponsor its annual concert and barbecue. Several dates are still open for bands. Call Ron Swasey if interested.

Tech swim concludes

The Rec Department's swim program at Shawsheen Tech has ended for the season. The school year use of this fine indoor facility consisted of Sunday afternoon Red Cross lessons for youths and an evening hour for family fun. Information on the summer swim program will be available soon.

New York

A group of big apple visitors enjoyed their bus trip to New York City last Saturday. A day trip was run by the Recreation Department after their initial visit last December proved to be so successful.

Wilmington visitors enjoyed many of the sights, including the Empire State Building, Statue of Liberty, United Nations, various plays and museums; the subway, St. Patrick's Cathedral, Central Park and others.

These New York Trips, according to Ron Swasey, allow Wilmington people an inexpensive means to see the sights and sounds so very unique to the largest city in the country.

The next trip will be a return visit in early December for Christmas shopping.

Spring programs

The Recreation Department will produce its spring schedule of events next week. The listing will appear in the Town Crier and distributed to students in grades K through six.

The information is also available in the town hall, public library and Recreation Office.

Soccer

The Recreation Department's two traveling soccer teams are playing weekend games in the Middlesex Youth Soccer League. The A team topped Melrose this past weekend, 5-1. Coach Shelly Maga is expecting this winning streak to continue.

The B team has run into a streak of bad luck with a series of close encounters of a losing kind. Coach Ellsworth sees signs of improvement however, and fully expects his charges to enter the win column soon.

Fun Run

The May Fun Run will be held at 10:30 a.m. Saturday, May 7 by the common. There is a three mile and a 6.3 mile race. The cost is $1.00, which becomes part of a winning drawing. The emphasis is on fun - not serious competition.

Memorial races

The 14th annual Memorial Races will be run on Saturday, May 28 beginning at 10 a.m. on the WHS track. There are races for all ages and both sexes. Trophies and awards will be distributed. Helpers should contact Ron Swasey in the Rec Office.

The New England Patriot Basketball Team includes the following players: Don Hasellbeck, Tony Collins, Steve Nelson, Vegas Ferguson, Ron Wooten and Robert Weathers.

The Hogan-Berry All Star Team will be captained by Assistant Unit Director Marty Martini. The All Star team will be receiving some valuable assistance from two North Reading High School basketball standouts.

Tewksbury rises to occasion, belts Cambridge, 6-1

Division I play is always the most competitive, and after three consecutive losses, the Tewksbury BU 141 team rose to the occasion and beat Cambridge, 6-1 on the home pitch Saturday.

First half scoring was started by Jimmy Simas after an excellent cross from right winger Mike Paglia. Jeff Stone then scored on a long shot that floated over the Cambridge goalkeeper's head. He was set up by the very good ballhandling of Dave Gammon. An extremely rare goal was scored by Marc Paglia when he took a right side corner kick. The ball curved in behind the Cambridge goalkeeper and into net after he had trouble controlling it.

Kyle Favreau then scored on a breakaway after Ricky Miles had popped the ball through the center area to catch the Cambridge fullbacks by surprise. Kyle waltzed in one on one and beat the goalie cleanly.

Second half scoring included goals by John Fleury and David Gammon, both of which came on penalty kicks, as the Cambridge defenders had touched the ball with their hands in the penalty area.

Excellent defensive efforts by fullbacks Todd Simas, Ed Sipowize and Gary Fink kept the Cambridge forwards frustrated for most of the game. Goalkeeper Mike Fitzpatrick also made some good saves to keep the momentum on the Tewksbury side.

Also contributing to the win were Jim Davis, Paul Mirabella, Sam Dias, Robbie Busch and Timmy Quinn. Saturday Tewksbury travels to Billerica.

Tewksbury tops Winchester

The Tewksbury Under 12-II boys soccer team beat an excellent undefeated Winchester team by a score of 3-0. This makes Tewksbury three wins and one loss in the young season, but it was the fine total team effort that enabled Tewksbury to dominate a team from a town known for its fine soccer.

The first goal came early with Jimmy Pollard converting off one of two Danny Femino assists, while the second came from a fine shot by halfback Chris Jarek. Besides scoring, Chris Jarek played a terrific game at midfield and was moved to fullback late in the game. Michael Doherty, playing his first game at right wing, scored the third goal, which was against a strong headwind and all but wrapped up the victory.

Preserving the shutout were dual goalies Jimmy Pollard and Kevin Breuer with help from their fine fullbacks David Meekins, Sean Wilson and Pat Romano. Playing excellent games at halfbacks were Ryan Adams, Sean Connelly and Ken Culbertson.

Also playing well up front were David Babine, Frank DeAngelo, John Field, Richard Proulx and Greg Taylor. Tewksbury's next game is at home against Billerica United.

Tewksbury (GU-14) 5 Wakefield Celtics 0

After last week's tough 1-0 loss to Billerica I, the Tewksbury GU-14 soccer team bounced back with a resounding 5-0 victory over the Wakefield Celtics. An all-around team effort resulted in the win, with excellent defensive play limiting Wakefield to just two serious attacks on the Tewksbury goal.

The halfback line controlled the midfield, and the forwards were easily breaking through a beleaguered Wakefield defense with some good passing and use of the wings, with only excellent goalkeeping keeping the score down.

Next week the GU-14 squad hosts the Billerca II team at the Christian Formation Center with an 11:30 starting time.

Tigers in Wilmington Little League action last week. A strong offensive team effort led by Mike Stuart (three hits), Paul Buonopane (two), Scott Munroe (two), Mike Panerello (two), Joey McMenimen (two) and Ken Lyons (two) kept the Royals in command throughout the game.

Greg Smith, Sean Marsh and Tim Fay each contributed single hits in a game that saw just eight Tigers reach base.

For the Tigers, Bobby Boudreau made an outstanding running catch in centerfield. Pitching chores for the Tigers were shared by Mark Tully, Tommy Pote and Roy Sargent.

Steele, training officer, Billerica Police Department.

The course consisted of some 60 hours of training of various subjects including criminal law, report writing, court procedures, first aid and CPR, firearms training and other police subjects.

The following officers received diplomas:

Lt. Edwin Williams, Sgt. Robert Beals, Sgt. Roger Lessard, Sgt. Edward Thompson, Sgt. Frank Giannotti, Sgt. Steve Mauriello, Off. Ralph Plumer, Off. Phil Ryan, Off. Dennis Foley, Off. Robert Richter, Off. John Plumer, Off. John Gerhartz, Off. Earl Enos, Off. Donna Keefe, Off. Kenneth Gray, Off. John Peterson, Off. Maureen Matarese, Off. Joseph Harris, and Off. Paul Rose.

Chief Stewart and the town manager congratulated the officers and thanked the Wilmington Auxiliary Police on behalf of the citizens of Wilmington for their services in the reduction of vandalism to town and school property.

Good Guy dinner May 20

The Good Guy Committee has selected this year's Good Guy from the many letters sent in for nomination. The committee would like to thank those who took the time to say who they felt was most deserving - and indeed there are many Good Guys in our community.

The committee will honor this year's outstanding winner with its annual dinner on Friday, May 20 at the Wilmington Sons of Italy Hall, Ballardvale Street. The festivities will begin with a social from 6:30 to 6:30 followed by a turkey dinner with all the fixings by Jean's Catering. Immediately after the meal, this year's "Good Guy" will be honored. Dancing will conclude the night's festivities.

Tickets are priced at $12.50 per person and may be purchased through former Good Guys: Rocco DePasquale, Ray McNamara, Dick Duggan, Frank Sferrazza, Larry Noel, John Brown, Bill Lopez, Rico Catalano, Jack Cushing, Howie Lefavor, Jeanne Meuse.

• Betterments

when the water treatment plant was voted. It was all for the people on the other end of town he felt.

"Rust in the water, you cannot believe. Once a week we go to that brick station with jugs in our hands.

"How are these people appointed? I never heard anything about it in town meeting. He said they made a mistake on the two inch main. Apparently they never heard of a verbal contract."

Smith answered some of the remarks later. He said he had been appointed a water commissioner by the town manager and had served more than seven years. It was not political. There was no pay. Just, one time, he had received two free meals. He had served on various committees for 20 years. All boards and committees in Wilmington serve without pay Smith said. "All hands serve for zilch."

"We spend money very frugally. I think we have done a good job. People are impatient, but we cannot accomplish much in one year."

Speaking of A.P. Rounds, the man who developed Hathaway Acres, Smith joked that he had "laughed his way to the grave" because he had put in two inch pipes.

The town meeting, to vote bonding, requires a two-thirds vote, Smith said. For betterments there is only a majority vote required.

Referring to the thought that the town meeting should "pass over" the water main article Smith warned that if the town does not vote for the water mains it will lose $173,000 from the state.

"We are not going to force this through. I would love to see a lot of people at the town meeting."

Another person to speak was Arnold Blake, for 30 years a water commissioner. He told the assembly that it is impossible to assess for more than the betterments received proved to be. "If there is already a water main, you have to count that in to take care of that."

Blake said he believes the water betterments are "a very fair way of assessing costs."

The residents of Marcus Road and Oakridge Circle left the fincom meeting after agreeing on a meeting to be held by them Thursday evening. The purpose is to appoint some delegates to the water commissioners meeting which will be in their office in the water treatment plant off Butters Row.

That meeting, in turn, puts the finance committee in a position wherein it will have to hold off its decision, on what kind of recommendation to make for the town meeting. The fincom will want to know, first, what the recommendation of the water commissioners will be.

Arrests

Shortly after midnight Wednesday Officer Venuti arrested a Tewksbury juvenile male after spotting a stolen car at Dunkin Donuts. The car had been reported stolen in Woburn a short time earlier from a Medford man. The youth was charged with larceny of a motor vehicle and arraigned Wednesday morning. He was released to the custody of his parents.

Folllowing an alleged attack on a Lowell woman early Thursday morning, James Kurker of Mystic Valley Parkway, Medford was arrested by sergeants Rooney and Palmer and Officer King. He was arrested on West Street in Wilmington.

Kurker was charged with rape, kidnapping, unarmed robbery and assault and battery. He was arraigned Thursday afternoon at Woburn District Court before Judge Gonnella. Bail was set at $10,000 with surety or $1,000 cash, which was posted.

The case has been continued for a conference May 18. The investigation which began at 4:15 a.m., involved the assistance of officers Gable, Spencer, Jim Cuoco and Peggy Perry.

A high speed chase up Route 93 from 129 to Concord Street and into North Wilmington finally ended at Shady Lane Drive where Kenneth Peterson, 20, of 146 Salem Street arrested. He was charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol, endangering, attaching plates and numerous other motor vehicle violations.

Officer Pat King made the arrest with the assistance of Officer Venuti and Sgt. Palmer.

Francis Velozo, 22 of Whitemore Street, Tewksbury was arrested by Officer Venuti and charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol. He was later bailed for a Monday court appearance.

After investigating an accident at Main and Cross streets Saturday evening, Officer Jim McNally arrested Bertrand Barchard, 52, of Taft Road, Medford. The officer charged Barchard with driving so as to endanger and operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol. Two young women received minor injuries in the accident.

Following an altercation on Bancroft Street Saturday evening, Officer Dave McCue arrested Robert Douglas, 26, of Federal Street. Douglas who was injured in the altercation was taken to Mass. General Hospital for treatment.

He has been charged with two counts of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, his alleged victims being Mike Smith of Federal Street and Robert Reid of Lang Street.

Douglas will be arraigned in Woburn District Court upon his release from the hospital.

Vandalism

Police are investigating numerous reports of vandalism at Deming Way. Residents have experienced damage to cars and property such as paint splattering and egg tossing. Someone even broke the locks to the septic chambers which is the sewer treatment system for the project.

Officials are concerned that some youths may enter the septic chamber and be overcome by fumes.

Apparently most of the problems stem from neighborhood youths and parents in the area should be aware of the possible dangers involved if children or teenagers hang around the Deming Way project.

Most problems occur during the early evening and when school is not in session.

Other activity

During the week ending May 3, Wilmington police officers responded to eight accidents, made six arrests and seven protective custody detentions, quieted 13 disturbances, assisted at a fire, rendered medical assistance once and investigated three larcenies.

Alert neighbors reported seven incidents of suspicious activity, one vehicle was reported stolen and a stolen vehicle was recovered, three trespassing, five traffic and eight trailbike complaints were taken.

Eleven alarms were sounded, one assault and battery, one domestic problem and a break and entry were investigated; three liquor related complaints were logged, one person was reported missing, one threat complaint was taken and nine incidents of vandalism occured.

The DeCelles family looks to Christmas '83

By PETER KENT

WOBURN – Christmas 1982 was not a merry one for the DeCelles family, but they are expecting Christmas 1983 to be especially joyous.

It was the holiday season, and Richard "Rick" DeCelles and his wife Joanne were readying for the 25th, along with their infant son Gregory, now six months old.

But just a week before Christmas, Rick, "feeling lousy, went to Mount Auburn Hospital (in Cambridge), they took some blood, they found out, and I was admitted to Lahey Clinic on Dec. 21."

What the blood tests revealed was leukemia attacking the 32-year-old man's body.

"It was very sudden," says Joanne, 26,. "He had never been sick until then."

"It was a great holiday for all of us," sardonically remarks Rick's brother Kenneth, 34, the oldest of the seven DeCelles children. "We had to fake it for the nephews (Rick has six)."

At the Lahey Clinic Medical Center in Burlington, Rick, a life-long resident of Woburn and now residing on Church Street in that city, underwent chemotherapy and "I went into remission three weeks later. . . ."

Joanne corrects her husband of nearly three years: "It was 28 days from the time he was admitted until the time he went into remission."

Rick was discharged from Lahey Clinic soon after, but continues to receive chemotherapy treatment on an out-patient basis. He has since returned to work at Ionics Inc. in Watertown, where he was a full-time pipe fitter until his illness was diagnosed. He now works part-time in inventory control; his employers have been "excellent" throughout, says Joanne. "super, just super," adds Ken.

The disease is in remission, the chemotherapy continues. But the biggest battle lies ahead.

"A bone marrow transplant," says Rick. "It's the only possible chance for a cure of any kind of leukemia."

And the only chance for a transplant lies in finding a donor.

"All the brothers and sisters were tested," says Joanne, with the doctors finding Ken compatible.

"Even with a big family like ours, you're lucky to have someone compatible," says Ken, a carpenter by trade who currently lives with his mother – remarried since her divorce from Kenneth DeCelles – in Wilmington.

"Everybody has been super strong through it all," says Ken of the family members. "We're just thankful. . .we're lucky to have someone who is compatible to be a donor. Friends, everybody has been behind us. It's tremendous."

Rick, Joanne, Gregory, and Ken will travel to the Fred Hutchinson Hospital in Seattle, Wash. in late June where Rick will undergo more chemotherapy and, for the first time, radiation treatment. The transplant will then be performed, "and the bone marrow will take three to five weeks to grow back into Rick," Joanne says.

In all, the family will spend five to six months in Seattle – Joanne, her child and brother-in-law staying in an apartment hospital staffers will find for them – and then return to Woburn, just in time for Christmas.

Obviously, the costs associated with Rick's fight with leukemia will be enormous. The bills already have totaled more than $30,000; the costs will increase dramatically.

Fortunately, Rick's health insurance has covered and will continue to pay most of the bills, but still the family will incur a tremendous financial burden. That's where the Woburn City Athletic Club, of which Rick and Ken are members and their father the lunchtime chef, comes in.

In mid-March, club members organized a very successful fundraiser to assist Rick DeCelles and his family.

"The insurance is not even going to come close to what this is going to cost," says Ken. "The City Club did a tremendous job for us. Two hundred and 50 people came. That's all the place can hold (at its Sylvan Road headquarters)."

In addition, at an earlier American Red Cross Blood Drive held in cooperation with the Woburn Elks Club, about 80 pints of blood were donated in Rick's name.

DeCelles S-6

RICK DeCELLES and his wife Joanne are surrounded by family members during a fundraiser held in mid-March at the Woburn City Athletic Club to help pay for costs stemming from Rick's battle with leukemia (for which he will undergo a bone marrow transplant this summer). Seated at far left is Rick's mother, Marjorie Kelley of Wilmington, and at far right his father, Kenneth DeCelles of Woburn. Back row from left are: Rick's brother Kenneth, who will be the donor for the transplant; sisters Marjorie Giordano and Jeanne Heos, and brothers Stephen and Edward. Missing from the photo is another sister, Nancy Krewson, now living with her husband in South Carolina.

Marriott readies for August opening

By JIM HAGGERTY

BURLINGTON – Marriott Hotel officials are eyeing a mid-August opening for their luxurious new $32 million facility off the Mall Road in Burlington.

For the past year, motorists along Route 128 in Burlington have watched the progress of the large, red-bricked building - one of the largest hotels north of Boston.

As of today, contruction crews are still in evidence, but so too are nearly finished rooms, including some with rugs. In addition, much work will have to be completed in the last three months outside the 9-story structure. In addition to landscaping, a dike for a large reflecting pool can be seen at the off-ramp on Route 128 that will be a focal point for many rooms and restaurants.

ARCHITECT's MODEL of the Burlington Marriott Hotel on Route 128 shows the lobby and ballroom area at right at the nine-story towers of guest rooms. At far right is giant free parking area which accommodates 750 cars. Extensive landscaping will beautify the entire exterior of the hotel.

MOTHER

We set a day aside each year and call it Mother's Day.
We bring her cards or flowers that all have this to say.
We love you Mom with all our heart
you mean alot to us.
You sacrificed your time each day
all without a fuss.
You gave us strength
when we were weak.
You taught us
when and how to speak.
You gave us hope
when all seemed lost.
You gave your best
at any cost.
I thank God when ere I pray
and not just on Mother's Day.
That in His arms He will embrace
my wonderful Mother with all His grace.

Marriott

allows for a clear view of Boston on a clear day. "We're up higher than you think here," smile Marriott officials, who consider the structure the "Kingpin of Development" in the Burlington Woods complex - and are adjacent to the Lahey Clinic.

In recent weeks, Marriott officials have literally set up housekeeping in office space in the Burlington Woods. Two full hotel rooms - including one standard 2-bed room and another with a king-sized bed - are on display for planning purposes.

"We've taken a lot of time on the interior design," note Marriott officials, who have hopes their interior design efforts will bear the name "Burlington Rooms" as a new standard for rooms joining the Marriott chain. A view of the rooms reveals Marriott's departure from traditional red and black with soft, pastel colors in evidence in wall covering, bedspreads and drapery.

The Burlington Marriott will be No. 119, 120 or even the No. 123 in the Marriott chain as 5 new Marriotts will open in August.

Developer/owner of the project is Finard & Company with William Finard as President and George Khoury as project manager.

With its convenient location and 420 rooms, the Marriott will feature first class meeting facilities and comfortable, attractive guest rooms in the $100 per night range.

As with other Marriott Hotels, there will be complete Health Club facilities with memberships open to Burlington residents and those of surrounding towns. These facilities will feature both an indoor pool and an outdoor pool adjacent to the reflecting pool. Also, there will be a sauna, hyydrotherapy pool and an extensively equipped exercise room plus a games room.

For guests who enjoy exercising in the outdoors, a wooded jogging trail with an exercise course is also available.

"Because we are located on America's Technology Highway on Route 128, we will make every effort to accommodate the many outstainding high tech firms in this market," notes James Kappel, the general manager of the hotel.

Already, Marriott officials report, the facility is nearly booked for the Christmas '83 season.

Dan Little, the Director of Marketing, reports the facility has exceeded Marriott expectations. Especially pleasing to Little and Kappel during a tour this week was the 9,000 square foot ballroom, the Diamonds Lounge (so-named because the town of Burlington is shaped like a diamond) and Foxglove - a green-house styled, multi-leveled restaurant overlooking the reflecting pool. Also coming in for much praise was Champlain's - an elegant dinning room.

Statistically, the Newtown Marriott will have 11 more rooms but the Burlington main ballroom can accommodate more. In fact, the Grand Ballroom, which can be sub-divided into 10 separate rooms, is second only to the Radisson-Ferncroft in Danvers in size. One must travel to the Sheraton-Boxborough for slightly larger convention space.

In all, there is more than 12,000 square feet of meeting space in the hotel.

Marriott officials point to the growth in the Burlington area in just the last five years. "The area is booming," says manager Kappel.

GUEST ROOM at the Burlington Marriott Hotel. There are 420 rooms, including five suites and 200 with king-size beds. Another 198 rooms have two double beds, and in addtion, there are 19 parlors (with wall beds), plus the two Exeucutive Suites, two Luxury Suites and the Presidential Suite.

"One of the reasons we are here is because of Lahey," notes Little. A bus is expected to service the Lahey and the Marriott, along with a possible bus to the Burlington Mall.

With 420 rooms, Marriott officials expect to employ "at least 420 for a staff", including 38 managers.

Marriott officials also point with pride at the growth of Marriott properties since 1926 - a time when J. Willard Marriott opened a root beer stand in Washington D.C. Expansion to Marriott came in the form of more root beer stands, a conversion to meals for the winter (later named Hot Shoppes), and then into into industrial catering into World War II and the post war years. The first Marriott came into the Washington area in 1956 ... and 123 will be in operation by August.

"Marketing plans call for 30 more by 1985," beam Marriott officials.

You can have an English Cottage Garden

You don't have to go to England to enjoy a colorful cottage garden. You can have your own....and it will be not only a delight to look at, but practical and productive as well.

The charm and versatility of an English cottage garden comes from the interesting combination of flowers, herbs, vegetables, berry bushes and even dwarf fruit trees that are all grown together. You first notice the flowers in profusion, but look closer and you'll find among them stout leeks, ruffled cabbages and lettuce, and tucked in here and there parsley, rosemary and dill.

A trellis, or other feature enhances the garden, writes Eleanor Perenyi in Country Journal. She points out that most of the flowers commonly used are perennials, and though they bloom only part of the summer, when they're mixed together there's always something in bloom. Why not plant one this year?

And there's another Tip from Country Journal.

DeCelles family

Rick seems overwhelmed, and somewhat embarrassed. He speaks quietly, from the heart: "I just want to thank everybody for the support we received...."

Rick's illness, Joanne and Ken say, has made the entire family stronger. They don't dwell on unfairness of it all, the "why us?"

"We do wonder what caused it," says Joanne, a native of Lynn. "But I don't think we'll pursue it."

She stops, reflects on the events of the past four months and those her husband faces over the next seven.

The transplant, she says, "is scary. But it is also a great opportunity to get back to normal, to not worry about what the next day will bring to the extent we do now."

She again pauses. The determination is evident.

"We will make it."

(A fund has been established to help Rick DeCelles and his family pay the enormous bills incurred. The fund was set up through the efforts of Jack Beauchamp, treasurer of the Woburn City Athletic Club and vice president of the Winchester Cooperative Bank. Contributions can be sent to: The Rick DeCelles Trust Fund, c/o Winchester Cooperative Bank, 19 Church St., Winchester, 01890.)

READING INSTITUTE

The 14th Annual Reading Institute, "Teaching Reading in a Changing World", will be offered by the Division of Graduate & Continuing Education at Salem State College from June 27-July 1 for three graduate credits or audit.

"Teaching Reading in a Changing World", is designed to bring a world view to the teaching of reading. By learning about various cultures, teachers, librarians, and reading specialists will broaden their learnings and those of their students. Successful reading techniques and new material will be incorporated into the study of people often neglected or inaccurately presented in the literature.

The objective of the Institute is to develop good readers and, at the same time, insightful, compassionate human beings. The role of the computer in a changing society will also be considered.

A special feature of the Institute is the eighth annual Massachusetts Children's Book Award sponsored by Salem State College.

For further information, call Ms. Phyllis Healey, Division of Graduate & Continuing Education, Salem State College, 745-0556, ext. 2303.

We would encourage family participation and discussion of this well-done film. Because of the powerful abortion scenes, parents should decide which of their youngsters would benefit by attending.

It's new Milk last 3 months unrefrigerated

Remember when the milk left on your doorstep was whole milk? That was the kind most people knew and wanted.

But times have changed in more ways then one. There are no longer kindly milkmen who leave milk on your doorstep or interpret the family needs if you forget to mark the order on a card. You now have whole milk or many varieties from which to select at the store.

And the latest kind of milk to reach some stores throughout the country isn't even kept in the dairy case. It comes unrefrigerated and sits on a shelf in a carton that doesn't resemble a milk carton as we know it. This is UHT (Ultra High Temperature) milk meaning it's been sterilized at 280 degrees F. for a second or two, rather than pasteurized at 160 degrees F. It's packaged under aseptic conditions in a new type of carton made of paper, polyethylene and aluminum foil and it lasts three months without refrigeration. No need to run out of milk ever again if you have some UHT milk on your shelves at home.

Since milk tastes best when cold, it's a good idea to refrigerate UHT milk before drinking. Once the carton is opened, the milk lasts only as long as conventional milk, i.e., approximately seven days. UHT milk comes in eight-, 16- or 32-ounce containers.

The color of UHT milk appears to some to be slightly whiter than conventional milk, but this is a very subtle difference most people will not notice. The taste of this modern milk is altered very little by the new process. Some say it tastes slightly cooked, others say it tastes richer than conventional milk, even when they are drinking the lowfat varieties. The milk's nutritional value is not appreciably different.

Another Newer Milk

The name's a tongue twister, but the effect is salutary, especially if you have digestive problems. The milk is called acidophilus, which derives from the name, Lactobacillus acidophilus, for the beneficial bacteria which are activated once the milk is ingested and warmed to internal body temperature.

Acidophilus milk tastes just like ordinary milk, but it's intended only as a beverage since heating for other uses would destroy the bacteria which helpmaintain the balance of microorganisms in the intestinal tract. This milk is available in whole or lowfat form, packaged in quart or half gallon containers.

Whole, Lowfat or Skim Milk

Whole milk has the biggest share of the market and comes in a wide variety of containers, from quart, half gallon and gallon cartons to gallon plastic jugs.

Whole milk is sometimes called vitamin D milk because that vitamin is usually added to fortify it. The amount used is 400 International Units (IU) per quart. Vitamin D is a major facilitator in the absorption of calcium from the gastointestinal tract. When inadequate amounts of vitamin D are present, calcium is poorly absorbed. Addition of vitamin A is optional for whole milk.

Most of the recipes you see in newspapers, magazines and ads have been tested with whole milk, unless otherwise specified. If families are buying 2 percent milk, they can use it in cooking except for special recipes calling for cream or half and half.

For those who have to keep calories at lower levels, there's skim milk. This also has been called nonfat milk, but that's not strictly true. Milk fat has been removed to bring the level to less than 0.5 percent.

When milkfat is removed, as in the case of skim or lowfat milks, vitamin A is added in the amount of 2,000 IU per quart. This must be done to offset the loss of that vitamin, which is contained in milkfat.

Mortgage tips for retirees

The last time many people now nearing retirement were in the home-buying market, the popular mortgage had a fixed term (up to 30 years) as well as a fixed rate (perhaps 5 or 6 percent).

Consumer interest rates were low as well. But all that has changed.

Home mortgages now come in a wide variety of sizes and shapes, and interest rates run around 12 to 13 percent.

Fortunately for those who want them, the basic fixed-term, fixed-rate option is still available. Most experts recommend that people who need to finance a retirement home try to find such a mortgage.

On the other hand, many retirees don't need or want a mortgage, because they can pay for their home with cash. However, buyers should keep in mind that deductible interest payments on the mortgage can serve as a tax shelter against the homeowner's retirement income.

For those planning to retire in 10 or 15 years, an increasingly popular vehicle is the growing-equity mortgage (GEM). In this case, the buyer makes a large down payment.

Initial monthly payments are comparable to a fixed-rate, 30-year schedule. After that, they go up about 5 percent a year with all of the additional money being used to pay off the principal. The term of the loan is 15 years.

Lowfat milks, those labeled 1 percent and 2 percent, have a milkfat content of 1.0 and 2.0 percent. If they're also labeled, "protein fortified," that means nonfat milk solids have been added to reach the 10 percent level, rather than 8.25 percent, which is standard. Vitamin D is added to almost all of these milks.

Lowfat milk comes in quart, half-gallon and gallon sizes just like whole milk.

Types of Chocolate Milk

When children or teenagers have a special occasion or need a treat, let them have chocolate milk.

Just as you have options of white milk, so, too, you have them for chocolate. Chocolate milk is whole milk with chocolate or cocoa and sweeteners added. Chocolate lowfat milk is made with 1 percent or 2 percent white milk with the same additions.

There's even a chocolate skim milk which is just what you'd expect: skim milk with chocolate or cocoa and sweeteners. Vitamin A is added to fortify them, while vitamin D is optional for all of them. Chocolate milks are generally packaged is the smaller, quart containers.

Other Real Milks

Those who want to save additional money and calories can mix their own milk. Reconstitute nonfat dry milk and water and use, or mix equal parts of it with other milk. Nonfat dry milk comes boxed or in individual packets.

Evaporated milk comes in cans. It starts out as whole milk, which is then concentrated by evaporating the water; it's homogenized and fortified with vitamin D (400 UI per pint), packed in cans, sealed and sterilized. Add water according to label directions if you want to reconstitute it. There's also now available an evaporated skim milk with vitamins A and D.

Sweetened, condensed milk is also canned but is completely different from the evaporated kind. It's whole milk concentrate to which nutritive sweetener has been added to prevent spoilage, and it is used for special desserts.

Buttermilk is made by adding a bacterial culture to milk for tangy flavor and special consistency. Sometimes you'll even find flecks of real butter for extra flavor, since it's a lowfat type of milk.

So you see, the choice is yours: whole, skim or lowfat; white, chocolate or buttermilk; UHT or acidophilus; nonfat dry or evaporated, in carton, can or an occasional bottle. You can even get the smaller cartons in school, cafeteria, restaurant or vending machine. There's always a milk to fit your need or mood.

Be prepared for an emergency

The following steps can be taken in order to prepare yourself for emergency situations. When an emergency is life-threatening, time is crucial. These measures can help make a difference when minutes count.

1. Know where to call for help. Keep such emergency numbers as the police, the fire department and ambulance services posted near the phone. Be certain you know the correct numbers for your town — the emergency line 911 may not be the most expedient number to call in your area.

2. Use the 911 emergency number appropriately. The 911 emergency number system is designed to insure a rapid response by police, fire and ambulance services to an emergency. If your situation is not appropriate for 911, do not tie-up their lines. As a Boston Police Department lieutenant said in a recent newspaper article,

"Everytime we receive a call that is not vital, someone with a real emergency has to wait longer to get in."

3. Learn to recognize an emergency situation. There are medical problems that require prompt, rather than emergency treatment. Certain injuries such as minor burns and cuts, and fevers can be treated safely, less expensively and usually quicker, outside the hospital emergency room.

4. Learn to perform cardiopulmonary resuscitation. It is especially important to study CPR if a family member or someone you know has a history of heart problems. Call your local American Heart Association for information about courses.

5. Take a basic first aid course. You will learn how to react promptly and effectively to an emergency situation. Call your local American Red Cross chapter to find out when and where courses are offered.

6. Know the medical histories of the members of your family. Keep medical records in a safe, accessible place. Information about past illnesses and hospitalizations, current medication, and any allergies is vital to emergency-room personnel. It is also important for a physician to know if there have been cases of certain diseases or disorders in your family — diabetes or heart problems, for example.

7. If you think your child has ingested a poisonous substance, call the Boston Poison Control Center 232-2120 or your pediatrician. Refer to the substances label for instructions as well. For some poisons, Syrup of Ipecac (used to induce vomiting) may be helpful, but in other poison situations such as a child who had swallowed bleach, vomiting could seriously harm the child. Syrup of Ipecac should be used only after you have received instructions to do so from a health professional.

Otoliths

How can you tell a fish's age? Simply by counting the rings in his ears. Though that may sound like a joke that you didn't quite catch, Country Journal proves it isn't.

Fish do have ears, and in their ears are pebble-like "ear stones" — also known as otoliths. These ear stones grow in layers throughout a fish's life — like a tree's ring. In fact, a new layer is added every day.

Ichthyologists, or one who studies fish, have discovered that these bands or stones can show not only a fish's age, but also how quickly it grew and how much its surrounding water temperature changed.

More important, these fish otoliths or eat stones can be used to monitor our own environment. They reflect changes in water temperature caused by industrial pollutants, such as heavy metals in our waters. So, peculiar as it might sound, studying the rings in fishes' ears is a valuable line of research for ichthyologists.

And there's another Tip from Country Journal.

Spring car maintenance important

Spring is more than just the time for car owners to remove their snow tires. Here are several important automotive parts and functions which the ALA Auto and Travel Club suggests should be checked:

FRONT END AND SHOCK ABSORBERS

After months of driving on roads damaged by frost heaves and potholes, have your front end alignment checked, along with the entire steering mechanism, including the ball joints.

This is also a good time to replace shock absorbers, which may have weakened or become worn during winter's demanding driving conditions. Faulty shocks can cause undependable braking, skidding, swerving, sideways, poor steering, loss of control, uneven and excessive tire wear, and an uncomfortable ride.

TUNE—UP

Check your owner's manual to determine if it is time to tune the engine. Specifications vary, but spring is often one of the recommended times for a tune-up. The parts and operation involved are spark plugs, points and condenser (if any), carburetor adjustment, air filter, all components of the emission control system, and the ignition timing. At the same time, have your serviceman check the battery, fuel pump, drive belts, and the engine compression.

TIRES

Each tire should be inspected for tread wear when the snow tires are removed. Remember to rotate your tires, according to the manufacturers specifications, and make sure the spare is in good condition.

Having the wheels balanced should be an automatic part of remounting your regular tires.

Spring care for good looking lawns

If your lawn has deteriorated this winter, you may think the only solution is plowing it up and seeding or sodding. Don't be too hasty. A lawn often can be renovated without using these drastic measures. Fertilizers, weeding and seeding may be enough. However, a conscientious program must be followed.

The main problem with many lawns is the build up of thatch. Thatch is an accumulation from stems and roots. It contains more woody material and does not decompose as fast as grass clippings. Thatch prevents air, water and fertilizer from reaching roots in proper quantities. This weakens the lawn and makes it vulnerable to insects and diseases. A thin layer of thatch is desirable because it decreases water evaporation, temperature changes and creates a mat providing a cushion effect. Thatch can be removed by raking or with power dethatchers.

When mowing your lawn, do not remove more than half of the foliage at a time. A desired height for a lawn is one and one-half inches. At this length, the lawn can build up an extensive root system to withstand drought that may occur in summer. This length also inhibits germination of weed seeds by shading.

Restore your lawn to good health this spring, and for more information, contact the Middlesex County Extension Service, 105 Everett Street, Concord, Ma. 01742.

Can an ostrich show joggers how it's done?

By Donald J. Frederick
National Geographic News Service

Forget the Boston Marathon. For real thrills and chills it's hard to match the animal running events staged by a group of Harvard University scientists.

Competitors have included 62 species of animals, among them snakes, tarantulas, lions, camels, kangaroos, goats, and pigs. The animals don't actually race each other, but are placed on treadmills running at various speeds to determine just how efficiently they hop, skip, jump, run, slither, or whatever.

By measuring oxygen and muscle energy used by the animals and analyzing how they shift from one speed to another, the scientists have amassed new information on how living things, including people, move around.

WOUNDED IN ACTION

Coaxing animals to do their stuff on a treadmill hasn't always been easy. C. Richard Taylor, the Harvard University physiologist who is coordinating the locomotion study, was clawed by a nervous cheetah and had to have 36 stitches. He also has chased runaway ostriches down corridors and suffered through an impromptu wrestling match with a reluctant chimp.

Taylor, whose work is partly funded by the National Geographic Society, occasionally has hit on offbeat schemes to keep his charges moving. He inspired lions to run at full speed by buzzing near their ears like an angry tsetse fly, one insect that plagues the animals in the wild.

Goats, dogs, horses, and pigs were among the star performers, hardly needing any encouragement. Cats were the worst. "They're perverse," sighed Taylor. "The offer of choice bits of tuna, nothing would keep them plugging away. Perhaps it's their sense of independence, but cats escaped us."

The animals that did cooperate showed that energy stored in the muscles gets all vertebrates — man included — moving in a spring or pendulum-type motion, sometimes both.

KANGAROOS SPRING AHEAD

Kangaroos, for example, are masters of spring power. When they hit the ground after a hop, both back and legs are positioned to take the next jump. In effect, the entire body acts as a spring to keep the animal moving. Most of the power for the next hop comes from energy imparted by the impact of landing.

The same thing happens with horses. When they change gait from a trot to a gallop all four hooves periodically leave the ground at the same time, making the animal's body a massive spring.

Long, lean tendons and the greater distances they can cover in a stride allow large creatures to move much more efficiently than small ones at high speeds.

When any animal, large or small, takes a stride, the energy flows from the muscle tendons, which act as springs. the foot hits the ground, tendons stretch, and when they snap back to their original position they help push the foot off the ground.

This mechanical motion keeps the muscle cells from using all their power and saves energy, allowing it to be stored and recovered for the next step or stride.

Taylor and his colleague Norman Heglund, found that because the muscles and tendons were so flexible, increased speed doesn't necessarily work off additional calories for a set distance covered.

As Taylor advises joggers, "It's better to run at a reasonable speed, because whether you cover a mile in eight minutes or four, you burn exactly the same amount of enegy."

The same thing applies to walking. The pendulum motion made by people when they walk also saves calories, because the energy from one step helps power the next. Like pendulums, people have natural momentums, and when they break out of this rhythm by walking either too fast or too slow, they're not moving as efficiently as possible.

HUMANS ON A TREADMILL

Vaughan A. Langman, a Wellesley College psysiologist, soon hopes to compare the treadmill efficiency of men and women.

"They'll be duration studies of ordinary walkers and runners — not professionally trained athletes," explained Langman. "We'll try to find out if both sexes are capable of running various distances — including quite long ones — at the same speed with identical outlays of energy."

Taylor and Geoffrey M.O. Maloiy, a physiologist from the University of Nairobi, already have found that women from Kenya's Kikuyu and Luo tribes would be more than a match for the average American male.

The women, who often carry enormous burdens on their heads, were put on a treadmill in Africa at various speeds. Bundles weighing up to 20 pounds seemed to have no effect on their energy supply. "It was as if they were carrying the first 20 pounds energy-free," recalled Taylor.

Back at Harvard, 20-pound backpacks worn by a couple of hefty male students soon had them gasping.

See how they run

Ostrich struts its stuff on a treadmill for C. Richard Taylor (left), a Harvard University physiologist, and his colleague Norman Heglund. Among 62 species of animals put on a treadmill in a detailed locomotion study, the ostrich proved one of the most willing workers and an efficient runner at high speeds. Capable of sprinting at 45 mph, the ostrich was helped by its size. At high speeds, larger animals move more efficiently than small ones, the researchers found. Long, lean tendons and the greater distances covered give the advantage. Like man, the ostrich moves with a spring or pendulum-type motion, sometimes both.

Hungary's capital city of Budapest, known as Little Paris on the Danube, is actually a blend of two riverbank settlements. The hills of medieval Buda on the river's west bank are linked to the elegant boulevards of more modern Pest on the east by eight bridges. Budapest is home of a fifth of Hungary's population and is the country's cultural, political, and economic core. says National Geographic.

Families, teens

Take a back to nature vacation this year

Thinking about summer vacations?

Consider the back-to-nature vacations for children, teenagers, and entire familes, planned by the National Wildlife Federation.

Travel to some of North America's most scenic vacation areas, and combine outdoor adventure with conservation education and exploration.

The National Wildlife Federation's summer vacations are designed for all ages. "Conservation Summits" are for adults or entire families, "Earth TREKs" are for teenagers, and Ranger Rick's Wildlife Camp is for children, 9 to 13 years old.

CONSERVATION SUMMITS, for adults or entire families, are six days of conservation-related activities in unique settings. This year's summits will be held at four locations: June 25-July 1, the Blue Ridge Mountains of North Carolina; July 3-9, the Rocky Mountains of Colorado; July 31-August 6, the Adirondack Mountains of upstate New York; August 14-20, the Canadian Maritimes, Antigonish, Nova Scotia.

Summit participants can register for workshops on birds, wildlife, wildflowers, map reading, geology, or flycasting, just to name a few. Teachers and college students can arrange to receive college credit for these workshops. Free-time activities include tennis, horseback riding, swimming, hiking, sailing, square dancing — depending on your summit choice. Babysitting and day care facilities are available at most locations. Costs for a family of our range from $850 to $1,150, depending on location and type of accommodation.

EARTH TREKS, for boys and girls of ages 13-17, are adventures in environmental exploration, backpacking, hiking, and outdoor skills. Participants will be guided by trained and experienced staff who know and appreciate the outdoors. The cost for Earth TREK is $385.

The Colorado Rocky Mountain Earth TREKs offer teenagers an opportunity to develop backpacking skills and an understanding of the mountains and their life forms.

Cosponsored by the Keystone Science School, these 12-day sessions also offer topics such as programs on astronomy, wildlife biology, geology, forestry, environmental law and Indian prehistory. There are four Rocky Mountain Earth TREKS: June 23-July 4; July 7-18; July 21-August 1, and August 4-15.

The North Carolina Blue Ridge Mountain Earth TREKs offer teenagers an opportunity to develop new outdoor and leadership skills and to become more aware of the natural environment. Cosponsored by Wilderness Southeast, these 12-day sessions also offer programs on subjects such as outdoor cooking, camping, wilderness management, folk history and folklore, and stream biology. There are four Blue Ridge Earth TREKs: June 19-30; July 5-16; July 22-August 2 and August 7-18.

RANGER RICK'S WILDLIFE CAMP, for children of ages 9 to 13, is in North Carolina's Blue Ridge Mountains, where an experienced staff involves young campers in an appreciation, awareness and knowledge of their natural environment.

"Quests" and "Mini-Quests" send the campers in search of experience in hiking, wildflowers, aquatic life, birds, trees and energy, among the many topics. Recreation activities include swimming, hiking tennis, fishing, reading and writing. The cost for Wildlife Camp ranges from $375 to $435, depending on the date. The four sessions are: June 12-23 (12 days, $375); July 4-18 (15 days, $425); July 21-August 1 (12 days, $375); and August 4-18 (15 days, $425).

For further information about any of these National Wildlife Federation vacations, call (703) 790-4363, or write to the National Wildlife Federation, Dept. PR2, 1412 16th Street, NW, Washington, D.C. 20036.

EATING SMART

By A.E. Denton, Ph.D.
Campbell Soup Company

"Eating Smart" is important to athletes and spectators alike. No one can give a winning performance or live a vigorous life unless they are in prime mental and physical condition. And, nutrition plays a vital role in overall health and well-being.

Unfortunately, nutrition is often misunderstood. This sampling of nutritional myths with their truthful counterparts should help set the record straight:

Myth #1: Using fad diets is a good way to lose weight quickly.

Reality: Many athletes have to constantly watch their weight to maintain a level at which they feel best for competition. While fad diets are tempting and promise a quick cure, they are not the answer. A simple approach to losing weight is to cut down on the amount of food eaten, especially foods high in fat or sugar. Research has shown that slow-eating foods—like soup—help to reduce overall caloric intake. Soups are relatively low in calories and are dense in many nutrients on a per calorie basis offering the best of both worlds—fewer calories and good nutrition.

Myth #2: Certain foods have miracle properties.

Reality: No single food can do it all. A wide variety of foods eaten in the proper quantities is essential for a top performance. Remember the basic four food groups: fruits and vegetables, milk and dairy products, cereals and grains, meats and legumes.

While athletes or non-athletes don't normally require any special food or diets, there are some positive steps you can take to improve your performance:

- Eat a nutritious, balanced diet every day to maintain good overall health.
- Watch your caloric intake to maintain a weight that is best for you.
- Eat wisely. Most meals should be light and well-balanced—not high in fiber, fat or sugar.
- Psychology or how you feel about a food is important. If you honestly feel a food helps you, it probably won't harm you, if taken in moderation.

The right to representation

Anyone has the right to be represented by the person of his or her choice in dealings with the Social Security Administration, Dover C. Crawford, Social Security district manager in Malden said recently. There are a number of rules governing the use of such representatives, however, Essentially these rules are designed to protect the claimant's interests.

The representatives may or may not be an attorney, but cannot be a corporation or organization.

The appointment of the representatives must be in writing. If the person is not an attorney, he or she must state his or her name and indicate that he or she is accepting the appointment.

In most cases, a representative cannot sign an application for the claimant. Also, he or she cannot charge or collect any fee without first getting written permission from Social Security to do so. The fee may be requested and authorized even if the claim is denied. If the representative is an attorney, Social Security can pay him or her from money in back benefits due. If the claim is denied and the representative is not an attorney or the claim is for supplemental security income (SSI) the claimant must pay him or her directly, but only after Social Security has approved the fee in writing.

Only the Social Security Administration or a court of law can decide the fee a representative can charge. Any contract the claimant may have signed is not binding. Both the claimant and the representative will get a notice of the decision on the fee. If the fee is decided by a Court, the law provides that it cannot exceed 25 percent of past due benefits.

Social Security will treat a representative as it would the claimant; he or she will receive the fullest cooperation in representing the claimant's interests at every stage of the prosecution of the claim.

Anyone with questions about how to get adequate representation should call any Social Security office. In addition, a booklet entitled, Social Security and Your Right to Representation can be obtained free of charge.

The Malden Social Security office is located at 200 Pleasant Street. The telephone number is 227-2400.

Brothers bring family style to cardiology practice

One patient recalls Dr. John Marais entering the room and saying: "Hello, I'm Dr. John Marais. You have met my brother, Gary. But I want you to know that I'm the elder and smarter of the two."

The physicians, whose cardiology practice is at New England Memorial Hospital in Stoneham, are known for their sense of humor, and their skill in setting patients at ease, and for their "family" ways with patients on the hospital floors and in their offices in the Medical Arts Building.

In fact, you feel so relaxed in conversation with them that you almost forget how remarkable it is that they are here — that two brothers a year apart, growing up in Africa, would follow similar paths through medical school, internships, then residencies and fellowships in Harvard-affiliated teaching hospitals in Boston in the same subspecialty; and end up practicing together at New England Memorial Hospital.

"Gary chased me through medicine," says Dr. John Marais. "I was always too scared to flunk."

"Patients seem to like it," says Dr. Gary Marais. "They get two for the price of one."

The medical odyssey started at the Malamulo Mission Hospital in Southern Africa. Their father, Henri Marais, was principal of the mission school. Exposed to the medical world of the mission hospital, and inspired by "an amazing surgeon," Jack Harvey, both brothers decided to become physicians. Graduating from the medical school at Stellenbosch University, the brothers took their internships in Canada, John leading and Gary taking his slot the year after. After practicing medicine in Zaire, John Marais decided to pursue internal medicine. Landing in Boston with a $200 check and a Greyhound ticket, he began interviewing for and was granted a residency berth at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital. Gary again followed in internal medicine. John left after completing his residency to practice as a relief internist in Guam, then returned to begin a fellowship in cardiology at Beth Israel Hospital.

Gary, having entered a similar fellowship at Brigham and Women's Hospital and the Harvard School of Public Health, was the first to "start the family bakery," says John. He joined the practice the following year.

The family venture also includes their mother, Faith Marais, as office manager, and the part-time assistance of Nurses Janeen and Dottie Marais, their wives.

With the input of the Marais brothers in cardiology at NEMH, the medical staff now includes five cardiologists, with Gary serving as chief of cardiology.

They are excited about the subspeciality expertise and services developed at the hospital, "in the suburbs, but close enough to downtown for special procedures," says Dr. Gary Marais. "At NEMH the department of cardiology does all but left-sided invasive cardiac procedures. This includes right-heart catherizations and placement of both permanent and temporary pacemakers. We have the most up-to-date exercising-testing equipment available. Our coronary care unit is rapidly becoming competitive with downtown."

Both cardiologists have high praise for the cardiac rehabilitation program at the hospital. "Supurb," comments Gary. "It's the best cardiac rehab team I've seen," says John. The cardiac rehabilitation program provides a 12-week, carefully-monitored approach to regaining heart strength and fitness, using a wide range of therapeutic and support measures. Because of the benefits of the program on its patients, less surgical measures are needed, according to Gary Marais.

Other good reasons to practice cardiology at New England Memorial are the Family Practice Residency (both physicians teach in the program), and the NEMH nursing staff.

"This hospital has the most caring nursing staff I've seen," says Gary. "Some teaching centers tend to stress the academic and ignore the social. Here, with primary care nursing, both aspects are emphasized. It's better for patients."

The way health care professionals relate to patients is important to the Marais brothers. So is preventive medicine. Tough on patients about things like smoking and exercise, they encourage them at the same time in a friendly and light-hearted way to make adjustments which can improve their health.

Both are involved in cardiac research. The kinds of lipid-lowering measures learned in research at Peter Bent Brigham are being utilized in the cardiac programs here says Gary Marais.

John, a member of a Harvard team doing research at Beth Israel Hospital and at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has been doing research in cardiology and radiology. Along with Dr. Richard Spears, he has effected direct viewing of coronary arteries by using a fiberscope analgous to endoscopy in other organ systems. Used so far during cardiac catherization and bypass surgery, the procedure may have treatment and applications, including laser-mediated cauterization of plaque build-up in the arteries.

Their research was reported in the December issue of Medical Tribune, and will appear in the journal of the American College of Cardiology in May, which will also publish the first of such photos taken inside human coronary arteries.

Having come around the world to develop their specialty practice, the Marais physicians find this a good place to make home base.

"All along we had a wish to work together," says John. "Now, if we could only clone a third one, we'd be in great shape."

Storage tips to help save space

Out of sight isn't necessarily out of mind when it comes to storing those household and personal items that are frequently used yet need a space of their own. When planning storage space for everything from kitchen utensils to seasonal clothing, accessability and organization should be top priority considerations. Help ease your problem storage items with the following tips from Mary Mulvey Williams, Extension Home Economist with the Middlesex County Extension Service.

Create unique storage bins using old toy chests, cabinets, and stackable wooden crates. Bring out the best in old wood furniture with a new coat of paint, or, let the natural beauty come through with a variety of stains and varnishes found at well stocked paint stores. Crates can be spray painted to match room decor. Arrange them attractively against a wall or use them as night stands and end tables.

Color code drawers for easy reference. Paint letter stencils on the drawers so that you can "see" the contents of each drawer before you open it.

Brightly colored hinges and drawer knobs painted to match or blend with a piece of furniture will compliment your storage area beautifully.

Camouflage shelving units with curtains hung from a rod painted to match and use lazy susans and shelf dividers to help you keep track of small containers.

Hilton at Colonial hosts

Run for Easter Seals May 15

The first annual "independence Run for Easter Seals," sponsored by George Page's Colonial will be held for men and women connected with the health professions on May 15 beginning and ending at the Racquet and Fitness Center on the Lynnfield-Wakefield line.

There will be two races, one of 2 miles getting underway at 10 a.m. and the other of 5 miles starting at 10:15 a.m.

The purpose of both races is "to provide an opportunity for members of the medical community to run together to demonstrate support for recreational programs for children and adults with disabilities."

The Easter Seals program will benefit through donations from those who agree to sponsor runners and from runner-registration fees.

George W. Page is donating the trophies to be given to the first three male and first three female finishers in both races. In addition the top fundraiser will be given a Weekend for Two at the Hilton at Colonial. The second-highest fundraiser will be awarded dinner for two.

Colonial will also provide an elegant brunch after the races for every runner who raises at least $30 for the Easter Seal Society.

The Ellison-Kaloust-LeBreck Agencies, co-sponsors, will present each runner with a T-shirt.

The event is being called "Independence Run" to emphasize the independent lifestyle the Easter Seal Society encourages, for those with disabilities.

The 5-mile run will be from Colonial, left on Walnut St., left on Summer St., around the Town Green and back to Colonial. The 2-mile run will be one mile along Walnut St. and back.

Members of the race committee include Jean Goguen of Lynnfield; Russell L. Jeffrey, M.D.; Therese Jeffrey; Lawrence J. Monaldo, D.D.S.; and Ed Laverty, R.N.

Entry forms are available by calling Dennie Daughterty at 683-1259 or writing to Independence Run, Easter Seal Society, 20 Ballard Rd., Lawrence, Mass. 01843.

How to make storage a snap

Create unique storage bins using old toy chests, cabinets, and stackable wooden crates. Bring out the best in old wood furniture with a new coat of paint, or, let the natural beauty come through with a variety of stains and varnishes found at well stocked paint stores. Crates can be spray painted to match room decor. Arrange them attractively against a wall or use them as night stands and end tables.

Color code drawers for easy reference. Paint letter stencils on the drawers so that you can "see" the contents of each drawer before you open it.

Brightly colored hinges and drawer knobs painted to match or blend with a piece of furniture will compliment your storage area beautifully. Camouflage shelving units with curtains hung from a rod painted to match and use lazy susans and shelf dividers to help you keep track of small containers.

Nostalgia trip in a VW beetle- that still zips along

By Charles E. Dole
Automotive editor of The Christian Science Monitor

"In those days we were the darlings of the public," asserts Dr. Carl H. Hahn, chairman of the board of management of Volkswagenwerk AG.

"But now," he sighs, "it's all changed."

Pointing to the stunning success of the VW beetle in the 1950s, '60s, and early '70s, things were zooming along beautifully for the West German carmaker as Americans took the beetle to its heart.

Beetlemania was in vogue!

And every last one of them was shipped over to the United States from the VW factory in the homeland — a steady stream that seemed never to end.

At one point, Volkswagen of America was selling 600,000 or more vehicles a year in the US, with most of them the long-familiar beetle, which, the VW management maintained, changed every year, but not too much.

Arthur Railton, then head of public relations for Volkswagen of America and now retired on Martha's Vineyard, Mass., used to regale the world's press each year with his descriptions of all those almost unnoticeable little things that had been done to the car to bring it "up to date."

You had to look very hard indeed to see what he was talking about. Even then you might miss it altogether.

A really big event was when VW added a gas gauge to the car back in the early 1960s. Up to then the driver would wait for the engine to sputter and then kick a small lever on the floor of the car to give access to a little more fuel in the tank. Then he'd head for the nearest gas station. And you know, I never ran out of gas on the highway.

VW even put out a thin booklet each year which told people how to tell the difference between a 1965 beetle, say, and the '66. Or it could have been the 1969 bug and the '70.

Changes there were, of course, but the obvious changes were few. One thing was sure. The buglike shape itself didn't change.

it was the same basic design Dr. Ferdinand Porsche had conceived back in the mid-1930s before the outbreak of World War II.

"We were a one-car company in those days," Dr. Hahn notes.

Today the Rabbit is a far cry from the beetle in the way people feel about their car.

The beetle seemed almost cuddly. It almost cried for help and sympathy from the motorist. And people responded by the millions — more than 20 million at latest count. But best of all, it was reasonably trouble-free and would last for a long time. Obviously, there were exceptions, some motorists would declare. "But after all, it's only human," others would chime in.

I still have a 1970 beetle, a spry 13-year-old that calls for little care, still gives about 32 miles to a gallon of regular-grade fuel, and just seems to last and last and last. At last look, the odometer had topped 155,000 miles — that's 155,000 miles — and all systems were working without a hitch.

And remember, that's with the original engine, not a replacement!

In fact, the beetle's biggest charm was its cheap price (about $2,000 for that 1970 bug), reasonable fuel economy — although some of the later-model bugs got less mileage on the road than my 1970 — and it didn't cost too much money to keep in tune.

In fact, the beetle was an "in" car all over the world.

But as safety and emissions regulations piled up on VW, the time finally came to "dump the bug" and roll out the Rabbit — or Golf, as it is known in the rest of the world.

An instant success, carmakers everywhere copied the Rabbit design and longevity seemed inevitable. Yet, the copycats, together with a faltering world economy and the in-force arrival of the Japanese on the Interstate, sent the Rabbit into a spin and sales plunged all over. US-built Rabbit subcompact sales in 1982 were off a stunning 40 percent compared with 1981.

Better days seem ahead, however, as a Rabbit replacement moves closer to the marketplace.

As for the VW beetle, however, it refuses to quit and continues to be built in several countries around the world. Sales of the Mexican-built beetle are soaring, Dr. Hahn reports, and VW drove off with about 45 percent of the Mexican car market last year, mainly because of the beetle's success. A year ago it had 30 percent.

"We are now manufacturing 800 beetles a day in Latin America," Dr. Hahn says, perhaps a little perplexed at the vehicle's continued appeal even as the Rabbit hops downhill.

Of course, you can't buy a beetle at a VW car dealership in the US today, because it doesn't meet all those federal regulations.

Even so, an enterprising group in California is now "federalizing" the Mexican-built beetle and selling it in the US for $6,995, plus accessories, according to Automotive News, the trade weekly. There's no warranty for the new car, however, according to a VW spokesman, because it is neither built nor sold by Volkswagen of America Inc., a subsidiary of Volkswagenwerk AG of West Germany.

Nonfederalized beetles — that is, VW beetles that do not conform to US safety and emissions standards — cannot legally be brought into the US.

Meanwhile, would I voluntarily get rid of my 1970 VW bug? No way! With no penetration rust on the car, and a quite-good-looking finish on the outside, it makes no sense — to me, at least — to push it off the road.

Also, its value is on the way up. While it may be worth $1,500 or more in the marketplace — and it only cost $2,000 to start — the depreciation amounts to less than $50 a year.

Where else can you find that kind of a car bargain these days?

Arctic fossil discovery changes view of history

By Boris Weintraub
National Geographic News Service

A series of prehistoric fossil finds in the Canadian high arctic has provided glimpses of the animal diversity at the time North America and Europe were connected and has raised new questions about when the continents drifted apart.

The fossils, found by Dr. Robert M. West and Dr. Mary Dawson in expeditions in the summer of 1982 and in 1979, suggest that at least some form of land link existed between what are now the two continents during the Miocene Period, 15 to 20 million years ago.

Earlier evidence, including volcanic rocks, undersea core samples, and previous fossil finds by Dawson and West, hinted that the land connection had vanished during the Eocene Period, about 45 to 50 millions ago when, under the generally accepted theory of plate tectonics, the two continents ceased to be part of a single land mass and drifted apart.

Devon Island Discoveries

The discoveries, made on Devon Island, include fossil skulls and bones of prehistoric rabbits, a shrew, and a rhinoceros, demonstrating the diversity of mammal species of the era. But most significant in the context of the land connection is a creature known as a tragulid, an artiodactyl from the Miocene Period whose closest relatives lived in Europe at the same time.

"The land connection was supposed to have been broken by this time, and if this little animal came from Europe, there must have been a connection we don't know about," says Dawson, who is curator of vertebrate fossils at the Carnegie Museum of Natural History in Pittsburgh.

"They provide the airplanes, the radio, and sometimes the food and the lodging," says Dawson. "Without them, you couldn't do this work."

High arctic research begins with a 2,169-mile jet flight from Montreal to the Northwest Territories community of Resolute. From there, the arctic islands are reached by Twin Otter airplanes.

"We take everything. All our camping equipment and all the food for length of time we'll be there are in wood boxes," Dawson says. "When we find a place to camp, they put us down and leave.

"We have one tent used as a storage tent for our writing materials, our kitchen which consists of a camp stove, and our radio gear. We set up sleeping tents, one for each of us and our personal gear. We've got our tools, our radio antenna, and that's it."

Food is fairly simple, mostly dry or freeze-dried fruits and vegetables. No liquids; they add weight. Instead the scientists collect water from streams, and mix it with instant coffee, tea, and dried fruit drinks.

"It's a simple and monotonous diet, but nutritious and high in quality," Dawson says.

The Radio Matters

When the two are ready to move, they radio Resolute for a plane to do the job. Radio contact is made twice a day, in the morning and in the evening, and is essential. In July sunspot activity broke radio contact, and Dawson admits it was scary.

"The longest we went was three days without any sound at all," she recalls. "We would have been all right for several weeks. But if someone had broken a leg or gotten sick and needed help, we simply wouldn't have gotten it. We'd be in dire straits.

"It can get on your nerves."

Transactional analysis

Understanding ourselves

Beginning Tuesday, May 10, New England Memorial Hospital will again offer the program "Understanding Ourselves and Others — An Introduction To Transactional Analysis".

Held in the hospital conference room from 7-9 p.m., the course is designed at an introductory level with no formal training in psychology needed.

Conducted by Community Educator and Psychotherapist Deborah Considine, the course is recommended for parents, teachers, nurses, management, counselors, other professionals in the human services field, and for anyone interested in improving the quality of their lives.

Specific goals of the course are: learning the basic concepts of transactional analysis; better understanding of ourselves and others: why we think, feel and act the way we do; improving communication skills; methods for more effective decision making; how to better parent our children (and ourselves).

Considine, who maintains a private practice locally, holds degrees in psychology and philosophy with her specialty in TA theory.

The course format is relaxed and casual. Participants will find it helpful to bring a notebook.

For information or to register, call Health Education, NEMH, 665-1740 ext. 426.

Planning your garden

Here it is spring, and there you are, a flat of tomatoes in one hand, a trowel in the other and one foot out the door to your garden. Well, wait a minute! Did you do any planning for this year's garden, or do you just have some rough ideas in your head? Most of us don't find it much fun, but planning is especially important to home gardeners because we garden in such small areas. Planning makes the best use of space, money and time, giving the highest yield of the best-quality produce. Some elements of planning are:

Know your site. What part gets full sun, where is it shady for part of the day? Are there any especially wet or dry spots?

Limit the size of your garden to what you can manage in the amount of time you want to spend gardening. A too-big garden can quickly become a weedy one.

Choose your crops carefully. The first thing to consider here is what your family likes. If they won't eat it, there's no point in growing it. Also important to consider: How much space will a crop take? What is its nutritional value? How expensive is it to buy during the growing season? Is it hard to find fresh in the market

Make a scale drawing of your garden plot. Measure it, mark which direction is south, and plan to orient your rows or beds east-west. Then review your crop list: What's tall (like staked tomatoes), medium (like broccoli), and short (like carrots? The tall crops should go toward the north, where they won't shade the shorter crops. By figuring out how much space your most important crops will take, you'll know how much room you have for less important or experimental ones. After allowing space for each crop, figure out how long it will fill that space and what, if anything, can be grown after it is harvested.

Now you're ready to go. You know the best place to put those tomato plants. Go out there with spade and sketch and fertilize and lime and start that garden! For complete information on vegetable garden planning and culture, request the leaflet, "The Home Vegetable Garden" from the Middlesex County Extension Service, 105 Everett Street, Concord, Ma. 01742.

Treat Mom right

This week we concentrate on preparing you to celebrate Mother's Day in the best way possible.

Flowers and candy are traditional Mother's Day gifts, but "personal service" efforts are the most appreciated.

According to psychologist Dr. Joyce Brothers, "If we think of the gifts in life that we've received, the ones most appreciated are probably those that required personal time and effort."

"Knitted mittens, an embroidered pillowcase or handkerchief show a considerable amount of effort. It doesn't matter at all how professional these self-made items appear. Truly, it is the thought, the time, that counts," she added.

There are a number of ways to help make your Mom a queen on Mother's Day, which was founded in 1925 by F. Regis Riesenman, who wanted to celebrate Motherhood and Moms. Here are 10 tips to help you plan for May 8th:

(1) Take your mother to a place that holds special memories for her. It could be a special garden in a nearby park where she once walked you in a stroller.

(2) For working Moms, offer a month's service of lunch-making and valet attendance, laying out her wardrobe, etc.

(3) Give Mom a certificate that entitles her to have mending and sewing chores done by you for one day.

(4) If you do have some money to spare, send Mother a bus or plane ticket and have her come and visit you.

(5) Recreate the splendor of ancient Rome for Mom in a home-made spa. Fill the tub with warm water and pour a package of dry milk into the tub under the running water. Have Mom spend a relaxing hour in this luxurious milk bath.

(6) Give Mom a month of "breakfast in bed" on the weekends.

(7) If you can't be with your mother, a personal phone call full of love and laughter may do a lot more then sending her a box of candies or wiring home flowers.

(8) Cook Mom's favorite dinner and offer to do the dishes.

(9) Plan a weekend getaway taking care of every detail.

(10) Give your mother a coupon that says, "Good for one full day of total service," including housekeeping, cooking and chauffering.

Start a Strawberry Patch

If you love fresh strawberries, and have a sunny spot for a patch, you can have them in abundance. . .that is, if you also have patience.

John Page, a county extension agent, writes in this month's issue of Country Journal that correct preparation of soil is the key element in raising strawberries. Strawberries not only need sun but well drained soil, preferably with a pH of 6.5. Have your soil tested to find out precisely what it may need. Also, turn the soil over well in advance and be sure to get rid of quack grass.

Before planting, fertilize the area well, then put in the berry plants 18 inches apart. When runners with daughter plants appear, set them in a circle around the mother plant. Pluck off blossoms the first year to strengthen the plants. Mulch in the fall, and next summer you'll have strawberries galore.

MUSIC:

The Rockport Chamber Music Festival will present its second season during the first two weeks of June.

Two chamber groups will perform each week in concerts Thursday through Sunday. For the Saturday and Sunday concerts, the members join in various combinations from two to ten. All concerts will take place in the gallery setting of the Rockport Art Association. For tickets and additional information, write Rockport Chamber Music Festival, P.O. Box 312, Rockport, Mass. 01966.

Eddie Weaver, veteran theatre organist and former keyboard artist for popular show personalities, will play two pops concerts on the Mightly Wurlitzer theatre pipe organ at Knight Auditorium, Babson College, Wellesley Hills, on Saturday at 8 PM and Sunday at 3:30 PM, May 7 and 8.

A wide variety of music from the light classics to the modern will be featured. Also included will be a short silent film comedy and a special Weaver-style sing-along.

Water Music, Inc. will host Jazz at the Plaza on Sunday, May 8th. The Widespread Jazz Orchestra and Razmataz will perform in the Ballroom of the Copley-Plaza Hotel in Boston, which will set up cabaret-style with a large central dance floor. Classic jazz of the thirties will be played from 8 PM to Midnight. For more information, call 876-7777.

From jazz music to Mother's Day, from your own strawberry patch to chamber music in Rockport, COMING ATTRACTIONS has something for every taste. If you beg to differ, write, care of this local newspaper and enlighten us. We always have open ears for anything new.

Want to go to China?

Ten openings remain for those interested in a three-week tour of the People's Republic of China. The trip is scheduled for August 4 — 24, 1983, and is sponsored by Learning Connections, a Boston-based educational company.

The trip includes three weeks of intensive study and field trip in three major cities: Shanghai, Hangzhou, and Beijing (Peking). Participants will spend a week in each city, exploring both the urban centers, cultural sites, and the rural countryside.

The purpose of the trip is to understand Chinese lifestyles. Arrangements have been made to visit selected families in their homes, and their workplace.

Some of the scheduled events include a trip to the Bund — the historic waterfront in old Shanghai, a river journey to the mouth of the Yangzi, a trip to the Great Wall and the Grand Canal, a tour of the Lingyin Monastery near the West Lake in Hangzhou, and tours through a number of factories and communes, including the Dragon Well Commune — China's larget producer of tea.

Applications must be made no later than May 15, and interested parties are encouraged to contact Learning Connections for more information. Reservations are limited. For more information, call (617) 523-2922.
